

As can be seen, there is no answer to the comments in the paragraphs of this letter, making further reference to the suppression of Mrs. Kennedy's testimony. According to the official Commission version, she was not looking at the President when he was hit for the first time and was when he was struck with the second of the only two bullets the Commission says hit him. She could not, therefore, have been in accord with the official version if she testified, as Rankin's letter above says about how more than one wound - "they" - "looked to her at the moment of impact". Either Rankin is wrong or Mrs. Kennedy described the impact of more than one shot. If the latter, her testimony is destructive of the entire official "solution" to the crime. This is all the more reason her testimony must be available to the examination of those who disagree with the official story. Mention point of rest letter on other subjects.
